The cities of Pahokee, Belle Glade and South Bay honored Rickey Jackson of the San Francisco 49ers with a parade last Saturday. Mr. Jackson returned home to share his accomplishments with the townspeople who witnessed him grow up in Pahokee, leave home for college, and eventually make it to the National Football League. The 49ers were the winners of Super Bowl XXIX which was held in Miami.

The parade began Saturday morning at Martin Luther King Park in Pahokee. Numerous fans and community members of Mr. Jackson's lined the streets of the parade route to show their support and enthusiasm for their home-town hero. According to one parade goer, "He (Mr. Jackson) has virtually put Pahokee on the map and he should be honored for his accomplishments."

Attending the festivities, and to show support for the Pahokee native, was former Miami Dolphins player Nat Moore. Mr. Moore has been named All Pro.

The parade consisted of 37 units and the parade grand marshalls were Willie Marshall, a long time friend of Mr. Jackson's, and Pahokee City Attorney Michael Stauder. Cars and drivers for the parade were provided by Steve Moore of Belle Glade.

The parade ended at the Pahokee High School football field and a ceremony was held in Mr. Jackson's honor. As the immense crowd of spectators and onlookers filled the stadium wearing Rickey Jackson t-shirts, numerous organizations made special presentations to Mr. Jackson. He was given proclamations and keys to the cities of Pahokee, South Bay and Belle Glade, and both the county and state also gave the grid iron star proclamations.

An evening reception, in which 200 guests attended, was also held in Mr. Jackson's honor. The evening concluded with guests socializing and getting to know Mr. Jackson.

Four local teachers named finalists in William Dwyer Awards

The Economic Council announced recently the 25 finalists for its 1995 Economic Council William Dwyer Awards for Excellence in Education.

Each year, the Economic Council invites the county's public schools and accredited private schools to participate in the program. Teachers throughout the county are nominated by their peers at the individual schools for consideration as the county's best teacher in one of five categories: elementary school, middle school, senior high school and vocational/adult education. Five finalists from each category are chosen by a selection committee composed of Economic Council members and instructors from Florida Atlantic University, Lynn University, Northwood University, Palm Beach Atlantic College and Palm Beach Community College.

Each candidate will be evaluated on the basis of professional achievements, community involvement and educational philosophy. In addition, each judge will visit teachers to view the educator "in action". The observations also will be considered. The winners will be announced at an awards banquet on Friday, May 12.

The awards program was named to honor the memory of William T. Dwyer, a former vice president of Pratt & Whitney's Government Division and the 1977 chairman of the Economic Council. He was a community leader committed to promoting excellence in education statewide with particular emphasis on Palm Beach County.

Finalists for the William Dwyer awards from our area are:

- Elementary Education - Annette W. Allen, Rosenwald Elementary School,
- Barbara Meroney, Gove Elementary School.
- Middle School Education - Veronica D. Shaw, Pahokee Middle/Sr. High School,
- Vocational/Adult Education - Arthur R. Eve, Pahokee Middle/Sr. High School.

Electrical fire destroys office of Dr. Manuel Soto

Brenda Bunting
Editor

An electrical fire which started in the attic area destroyed the offices of Dr. Manuel Soto Saturday evening.

Firefighters from the Belle Glade Fire Department were called to the location at 1100 South Main Street, Belle Glade, about 9:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 18. No one was in the building at the time.

Fire Chief Tony Tuliano said the building was well involved by the time they were called and it took firefighters about 30 minutes to get the fire under control.

Chief Tuliano said the state fire marshal was called to the scene after the fire was extinguished and he determined the fire started in the attic area and was caused by electrical wires. He ruled the fire accidental.

Chief Tuliano estimates the damage to the building at about $340,000.

Dr. Soto, who has a busy medical practice, has given 996-5197 as the number for his patients to call.

Strike averted at U.S. Sugar Corp.

The more than 800 members of the International Association of Machinists Union at U.S. Sugar Corp. Saturday voted to ratify a salary and benefits pact averting a threatened strike.

Negotiators shook hands on the agreement Friday afternoon following weeks of sometimes difficult negotiations. A federal mediator had worked with the negotiation teams during the last few days. Union negotiators recommended that the membership approve the new contract.

"Reaching this agreement required that both sides accept compromises," said Robert Buker, senior vice president of U.S. Sugar. "We believe it was the right thing to do. This means we can continue with the harvest with only a minor interruption and more importantly it removes the threat of an economic blow to our entire community."

As the contract deadline of Saturday night neared, the company began shutting down all harvest operations and the Clewiston and Bryant sugar processing mills because of the possibility that workers would not be on the job after the contract expired at midnight Saturday. Mr. Buker said following the vote by the workers all work turned to putting the mills back into operation.

Under terms of the new three-year contract, workers would receive a 2 percent increase in wages each year for the next three years. They are also guaranteed a 6 percent bonus this year.

Future bonuses are discretionary and depend on the profitability of the company. The employees also received a reduction in the deductible of health insurance policies provided by the company.

Union members agreed to accept a two-tiered wage system for all new employees. While new employees will be paid at a lower level, the system does not affect current employees either for current wage levels or promotions they may receive in the future.

Company negotiators said current wages paid skilled workers at U.S. Sugar were significantly higher than pay throughout the rest of Florida for similar jobs. New workers would start at a wage that is comparable to the wages paid elsewhere.

The company's request for a random drug testing program is also included in the contract. The company spokesperson said safety considerations at many heavy machinery job sites required a high level of confidence that the job sites were drug free.

The workers also agreed to a provision that will allow renegotiation of salaries and benefits should the U.S. Congress change provisions of the national Sugar Policy which protects American farmers from unfair foreign competition thus damaging the company's ability to remain economically healthy. The Sugar Policy will be reviewed by Congress this summer.

Man reports burglar seen leaving his neighbor's home

By Brenda Bunting
Editor

An alert neighbor helped police catch a burglar Monday afternoon after the man was observed leaving a house with good stolen from the home of Katie Alvarez, 87.

Patrolman Matthew Sweet, arrived at the home of Ms. Alvarez, who lives at 200 S.W. Second Street, Belle Glade, after a neighbor called and said he had seen someone leaving the elderly woman's home with some of her household goods.

The unnamed good samaritan described the burglar and a BOLO (Be On the Lookout) was put out on the suspect.

A man fitting that description was stopped at S.W. Fifth Street and Ave. E by Patrolman Sweet and brought back to the scene where the witness positively identified Robert Christler, 37, as the man he has observed burglarizing Ms. Alvarez's home. Some of the stolen items were recovered and Christler was arrested for burglary and grand theft. He was taken to the Palm Beach County Jail and is being held without bond.

The tornadoes struck at the worst possible time. Of course, there is no "good time" for a tornado to hit your town but the two twisters that nearly destroyed Arab, Ala. last week came calling in the middle of the night.

The first tornado struck at 5 a.m. Most of Arab's 5,900 residents were sound asleep. The second storm came 25 minutes later. And, to make matters worse, these tornadoes were monsters.

According to the National Weather Service in Birmingham, Al., tornado number one had sustained winds of 165 miles per hour. It was at least one-half mile wide and remained on the ground for 14 miles.

Tornado number two contained winds of 135 miles per hour. It was one quarter mile wide and carved a 12 mile long path of destruction. Three people were killed, over 100 injured and 80 percent of Arab was destroyed.

The National Weather Service did issue a tornado warning but with most of the town asleep but many people knew the twisters were coming. Ironically, the town had recently rejected a proposal to add weather warning sirens because the cost was considered too high.

In many respects, the people of Arab never had a chance. After all, there's not much you can do when two giant tornadoes strike in the middle of the night. Or, is there?

There was one safety item that may have given the residents of Arab a few seconds warning. It is inexpensive, it works 24 hours a day and no home should be without it. What is this weather warning miracle? It is a weather radio.

For under $30, you can purchase a weather radio that will provide continuous weather information from the National Weather Service. It's all weather, all the time. The current temperature, the week-end forecast and boating conditions are available around the clock.

And, when the weather turns nasty, the weather radio is always there. When the National Weather Service issues a weather warning the radio will sound an alarm followed by the warning information.

So, even if a tornado was to strike in the middle of the night, your weather radio would give you a few seconds to react. Chances are your home is equipped with a smoke detector. Think of a weather radio as a smoke detector for severe weather.

This week has been declared Hazardous Weather Awareness week in Florida. It's a time to go over safety procedures as we prepare for the beginning of the thunderstorm season. Florida's a great place to live but not every day is peaches and cream. We have more thunderstorms than any other state, we rank third in tornado frequency and there's the ever present threat of hurricanes.

The best thing you can do this week to prepare for the return of the thunderstorms is to purchase a weather radio. It doesn't cost much, it's easy to operate and it will always be there if the weather turns bad.

A weather radio will give you extra time to prepare for severe weather. When it comes to tornadoes every extra second counts.

Mike Lyons is the weatherman for WPBF Channel 25.

How many times have you heard this phrase said in an off handed manner? Just what is a stroke? Do they occur to "old" people or could a young person have one? What causes them and what can we do to prevent them? Most of us know we just don't want it to happen to us.

The medical terminology for what is commonly known as a stroke, is a cerebrovascular accident, or an unexplained happening (accident) to the blood vessels (vascular) in the head (cerebro).

The warning signs of a stroke tend to come on suddenly and without warning. If any of the following occur, even briefly, you should call your physician as soon as possible and get medical attention: one sided weakness or numbness of the face, arm or leg; dimness or loss of vision, particularly in only one eye; loss of speech, or trouble talking or understanding speech; and severe, unexplained headache or dizziness, unsteadiness, or falls.

The primary risk factors for strokes include:

age greater than 65; male gender or sex; African American descent; hypertension (high blood pressure); heart disease; diabetes mellitus; cigarette smoking, particularly when combined with use of oral contraceptives or birth control pills; person or family history of stroke or "mini-strokes" (TIA's or transischemic attacks).

Secondary risk factors which increase the likelihood of heart disease, which is a risk factor for stroke in itself, include elevated blood cholesterol and lipid levels, excessive alcohol intake, physical inactivity, and obesity.

To reduce the likelihood of a stroke, lifestyle modifications, such as stress reduction, relaxation techniques, etc., as well as a diet low in fat, cholesterol, and sodium may need to be considered. As for young people and their susceptibility to have a stroke, just think about how many high fat (french fries, hamburgers, pizza, fast foods, etc.) foods that young people eat. Whatever happened to fruits and veggies? Diets high in fats and cholesterol may very well lead to more complications for today's youth as they grow and mature, only time will tell.

So, until next time, stay informed and stay healthy.

Paula Swaford, R.N. is the administrator of First American Home Care of Belle Glade.

Not an opera fan

"Although I'm not an opera fan, I enjoyed the performance by the Palm Beach Opera at the Dolly Hand Cultural Arts Center this past Saturday evening.

I think that we should always try to have an open mind to various types of music, even if it isn't our first love. Hats off to those who gave a good performance and to the conductor who made it very interesting."

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

Between 1984 and 1994, state spending jumped from $13.3 billion to $35.5 billion. Even with the effects of inflation, that represents a 92.2 percent increase. Yet, during that same period, Florida's population only grew 23.4 percent.

Members of the Florida Senate are trying to divert the flow of money away from state coffers and back into the pockets of private citizens. Senators have asked state agencies to justify their expenditures through a theoretical exercise: if the agency's budget was reduced by 25 percent, which programs would they cut?

Many agency heads assert that no state program is non-essential. That claim begs the question. For instance, many people enjoy the annual Florida Folk Festival. That doesn't give it priority over schools, roads or prisons. Over and over again, Senate lawmakers have reiterated the theoretical nature of this budget review. They are acutely aware of the needs of their constituents, but they also have a moral obligation to spend our money wisely. And that's the whole point. Government does not spend its own money -- it spends ours.

The business community wholeheartedly supports the Senate budget review. I suspect that when taxpayers are told the truth, they will as well.

Sincerely,
Jon L. Shebel
President and Chief Executive Officer
Associated Industries of Florida,
Tallahassee, FL

Dear Editor:

Governor Chiles and many of my legislative colleagues and I are committed to cutting away layers of needless and unreasonable state regulation this year. While we could spend hours pouring through our statute and rule books looking for regulations we deem to be ridiculous, I feel the best way to find examples of excessive regulations is from your readers -- the people who must deal with them daily.

We have more than 2,000 pages of law on our state statute books and more than 24,000 pages of rules implementing those laws -- and those laws are growing by about 1,000 pages a year. We have allowed regulation to develop into a nearly unmanageable mess that is compromising our ability to grow commerce for Florida.

I am asking your readers to send me specific examples of an unnecessary or unreasonable regulation that they've run across in their daily lives. We need solid, strong examples of this to make our case in Tallahassee this year.

I am requesting that these examples be sent to my legislative office.

Thank you for your assistance. I hope that together we can begin to hack away at the unreasonable regulations that keep us from prospering.

Sincerely,
Rep. Lois J. Frankel

Guest Commentary
A difficult year forecast for sugar growers

Dalton Yancey

By Dalton Yancey
Executive Vice President
Florida Sugar Cane League, Inc.
Washington, D.C.

Although successful in the past, this year's Farm Bill debate may prove to be the most difficult ever faced by sugar cane and sugar beet farmers. The change of leadership in the U.S. Congress, a full frontal attack by the big food corporations, being targeted by a coalition of environmental groups, and predator sales practices by both beet and cane refiners will make this year tough sledding.

A sugar title has been successfully presented and passed by Congress in farm legislation since 1981. The Farm Bills of 1981, 1985, and 1990 were hard work, and uphill battles, but 1995 may be the hardest yet. We have always had to educate and justify the sugar title of each Farm Bill to members of Congress and this year will be no different. We have also had to debate the issues put forth by the big food companies as well.

The Challenge of a New Congress

As everyone knows, the U.S.

Congress experienced a fundamental change this November. The Democratic leadership for the last 40 years has now been replaced by a new Republican majority, whose priority is "reform" and "less government". In this atmosphere, the laws governing sugar and other farm commodities have been targeted by some to be "reformed" and either eliminated or down-sized.

Farm legislation is one of the true success stories of this century. Americans enjoy the most wholesome, safest, highest quality, and, yes, the cheapest in the world. Only eight percent of America's disposable income is spent on food eaten at home. No where in the world or in the history of the world has that happened. So Congress should be careful and not dismantle this successful farm policy.

Although we are not without friends in this new Congress, many of the champions for sugar growers are no longer in office or are not in leadership positions. We will need new champions and new leaders. We are fortunate to have excellent members of Congress such as House Agriculture Chairman Pat Roberts of Kansas and Subcommittee Chairman Tom Ewing of Illinois, who will work diligently for farmers this year. They are both new to their leadership roles and neither have sugar in their districts. Each is farmer oriented and has pledged to do all they can to re-authorize the sugar title. Both have stated to sugar farmers that in order to be successful, we must be united and focused on what we need.

On the Senate side, farm state senators outnumber the urban members but, the Chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee, Richard Lugar from Indiana, has voted against sugar and even tried to lower the loan rate two cents a pound. Although he is from a farm state, and has personal farming interests as well, he opposes the sugar title. Fortunately, we have some strong bipartisan support within the committee, and Senator Bob Dole, of Kansas, the majority leader of the Senate, is a farm friend, though he voted against sugar in 1990.

So, our work is cut out for us in this new Congress. If we can stand strong and united, and work as a team, we can be successful.

Big Food Companies Declare "War" on Sugar Farmers

Two weeks ago, in the National Journal, the association executive of the big food companies who use sugar, declared war on sugar farmers. He said, "This time it's war. I'm no more Mr. Nice Guy. We intend to abolish the sugar program."

The Sugar Users Association (SUA), has members who buy the bulk of sugar in the United States. Their members include, Coca Cola, PepsiCo, General Mills, M & M's, Hershey, Kraft General Food, RJR Nabisco and other similar companies. They have always opposed sugar policy which keeps American farmers from being victimized by foreign governmental treasuries.

Ask Dr. Boltson

Dr. David Boltson is the associate director of the Western Palm Beach County Mental Health Clinic in Belle Glade, and is a licensed psychologist in private practice in Lake Worth.

see, you are correct that the Glades has become an extremely desirable place to live. We have been receiving so many responses to our ads, that we are now able to require that an applicant has at least 10 years experience as a CEO.

How disappointing. I was so hoping to move to the Glades. Don't give up completely. Ever since Public moved their corporate offices here, they occasionally have openings for stock boys at $10/hour.

To live in the Glades, it would be worth it!

Keep your hopes up and keep trying. Positive changes are possible. Why only 10 years ago, in 1984, the Glades was on the verge of financial disaster. We used to be known primarily as a farming region, and South Bay Growers had just shut down operations. We had an excess of teen parents, and too many of our youth just weren't taking school seriously. Folks spent more time trying to get welfare benefits than they did in trying to receive vocational training.

Then, in 1985, things began to turn around. As they started construction on the South Bay prison, a new level of professionalism and motivation overtook the region. In 1986, Mayor Leigh Woodham successfully oversaw a "Beauty For Our Region" campaign. Condemned buildings were razed and others were fixed and painted. New plants were added to all city streets, which earned us the nickname "Green City, USA."

In 1997, Mayor Woodham created tax credits which brought in developers to build the West Canal Waterfront mall and Marina Civic Center complexes.

In 1998, Present Gingrich instituted capital punishment for all parents on welfare who had more children, and weren't involved in a training program. That controversial move, combined with the opening of Superintendent Ramsey's "Free daycare for everyone and university center", got the entire Glades population educated and working.

In June of 1999, National Drug Car Clearance Anthony instituted the "Taste of Your Own Medicine" statute. All drug dealers, when caught, were forced to inhale, ingest, or otherwise use their own drugs every hour for two months continuously. In about three months, the dealers were either no drug dealers left, or no one wanted to deal drugs. Then, the Glades really began to move forward.

Today, in 2004, as you know, the Glades is one of the most desirable, culturally diverse, and harmonious regions in which to live. Both children and parents are motivated to learn. Everyone keeps their homes and neighborhoods looking beautiful.

In 1985 this was not so, but our dreams, visions, and motivations started us on the road to success. You can do it, if you just take those first steps.

Thank you for that inspiring advice.

Conversations from the 21st Century

Bring, ring...CLICK.
Hello, Belle Glade Corporate Center.

Yes, Hello. My name is Theodore Smith. I'm responding to your advertisement in the New York Times for an office manager.

Could you tell me a little bit about your credentials?

Well, I've got an MBA from Harvard, and for the past five years, I've acted as CEO of San Francisco's largest brokerage firm.

I don't believe our position will have a salary that is competitive with what you are currently earning. Tell me, why are you interested in moving here?

Are you kidding? Everyone in America wants to move to the Glades. I don't like the crime, congestion, and earthquakes in San Francisco. The Glades is known for its wide open spaces, excellent schools, and strong sense of community. Its recreational amenities are unparalleled anywhere. The fishing and biking trails are world renowned. The Belle Glade Polo Grounds are where all the top international players now go. Your 360 degree IMAX Cinema Complex is state-of-the-art for family enjoyment. The Belle Glade Library and Art Gallery has become a model for other communities.

I can see you know quite a lot about what it's like to live in the Glades.

So can we set up an interview?

Unfortunately not. You

Sugar

This year, the SUA is amassing an arsenal of weapons to attack sugar farmers. They have retained large public relations efforts, new big name Washington lobbyists, and hired a grass roots company to wage war on sugar farmers in the United States. They have deep pockets, and have a massive advertising budget. While sugar prices have gone down during the five years of the current Farm Bill, these giant food conglomerates have continued to increase their prices to consumers. They have been among the most profitable companies in the world, but they want more; they want sugar at a lower price; all at the American sugar farmer's expense!

It is short sighted by them and they are exploiting the Republican Contract for America for their own greed.

They will present formidable opposition in the Farm Bill debate and have enlisted others to help them including many from the environmental movement.

The Everglades debate with the passage of the Everglades Forever Act.

This act, passed by the Florida legislature, will assess over 300 million dollars on farm land in the EAA. But the environmentalists want more, they want to destroy sugar farming in Florida and are attacking American farm policy in order to achieve their ends. These insatiable environmental groups want to take down not only Florida sugar farmers in their battle to take more land, but all American sugar cane and beet farmers in 17 other states as well.

Some members of Congress who might be inclined to support the Farm Bill this year, may be pulled off by these environmental extremists. We will have to work hard to educate congressmen about the fact that the Everglades issue is resolved and that we are paying handsomely to address our environmental concerns.

sumers, taxpayers and sugar farmers are fortunate that good policy can be achieved without costing the government a penny.

This means that when marketing allotments have been established by the United States Department of Agriculture in order to maintain no cost, sugar cane refiners and beet processors may sell sugar with the knowledge that too much sugar supply will not decrease returns to growers. Some sugar beet processors are selling their sugar below their own federal loan rates! To make matters worse, some sugar cane refiners are dumping their sugar cheaply as well. These trade predators are trying to gain more than their fair share of the U.S. market and this is resulting in a weak market.

Success in the Farm Bill Will Have to Come From Unity and Fairness

After reading about how much sugar cane and beet farmers have going against them in the year's Farm Bill debate one could become discouraged. But I refuse to be discouraged and I am asking everyone in this industry to not be discouraged either. We must pull together to achieve success.

Our combined unity in the past has been our key to successful farm legislation and it will be the key again this year. It can succeed in 1995 as we have in the past, but we will have to work and pull together.

Environmental Groups Target Sugar Farmers

Members of the Everglades Coalition at the annual meeting in Florida, last month, targeted the nation's sugar cane and beet farmers this year in the Farm Bill debate. After years of fighting both in and out of court, the federal, state and regional governments along with the farming interest in the Everglades Agricultural Area (EAA) settled

Predator Sales Practices

As a part of the 1990 Farm Bill, stand-by-market allotments were included to keep sugar policy "no cost" to the federal treasury and market oriented so that the market place provided returns to sugar farmers. Since America is a net importer of sugar, the government can achieve a no cost sugar policy by both controlling imports and, if needed, domestic sugar production. Sugar is unique in this area and con-

New Strength And Aerobics Workout Cuts Exercise Time In Half

(NAPS)—In the wake of the holiday dining season, the average American has put on six to eight pounds—and then spends January and beyond trying to shed that extra weight and get back in shape. Fortunately, there are now some enjoyable new ways to do that.

It all thanks to a new, time-saving fitness concept called "strength aerobics." The term was launched by America's fitness movement in the late '60s—Dr. Kenneth Cooper—says it's a concept that "will fundamentally change the way America works out."

And it's an idea that has already attracted the attention of a fitness equipment manufacturer. NordicTrack has just introduced their new StrengthAerobics® fitness machines—a self-powered treadmill, a skier and a combined Multi-Trainer on which you can run, walk, step, or ski.

So what's all the excitement about? The concept of strength aerobics is simple: it's a workout in which you do your aerobic exercise and strength conditioning at the same time. If you could bike and lift weights simultaneously, you'd be doing what is being termed strength aerobics. With this new form of exercise, you're developing your heart, lungs, muscles and bones all at once. In essence, you're getting the benefit of two workouts in the time it takes to do one.

The real beauty of the concept of strength aerobics is that it cuts your exercise time in half," said Dr. Robert Cantu, a past president of the American College of Sports Medicine.

"By this, you get the minimum amount of activity that health authorities say you need, you had to do three aerobic and two strength workouts a week, for a total of about two hours of exercise. But now, with this new form of exercise, you can get pretty much the same results in three 20-minute workouts that develop your aerobic capacity and strength simultaneously. With this new approach, it takes only about an hour a week to get all your fitness requirements. That's a huge improvement."

How can you do this new workout? While Dr. Cantu predicts that it will soon be common in homes and health clubs, the first fitness equipment manufacturer on the scene is NordicTrack. The company has just introduced three StrengthAerobics fitness machines that allow you—for the first time—to get your aerobic and strength-building exercise simultaneously, in one workout, on one machine.

New exercise machines that give a total aerobic and strength conditioning workout at the same time are ideal for those with busy lifestyles.

Fitness experts say these new exercises can help you:

- feel healthier as you strengthen your body and lose fat;
- look and perform better because your metabolism increases, leading to faster weight loss and greater ease performing everyday tasks; and
- feel great as you gain energy and confidence.

Each of these new machines uses the technology of NordicTrack's best-selling cross-country skis to deliver a total-body aerobic workout. But the new technology the company has developed to strengthen the arms, chest, back and shoulders is what makes the StrengthAerobics machines stand out.

While NordicTrack's traditional ski machines have hand-cranked pull, these new skiers, treadmills and Multi-Trainers have long arms and pulleys that impose resistance on both the push and the pull strokes, with more resistance during part of the stroke.

This variable resistance comes from patented twin arms that are similar to those used on Nautilus machines. This type of advanced resistance mirrors the body's natural strength curve—so that your muscles are worked to the fullest.

The arm poles also have a patent-pending design that allows you to focus on different muscle groups by grasping the poles in different ways.

Both the upper and lower resistance in these machines are varied while you're working out, so you can create different circuit or interval routines that keep your workout fresh and interesting.

The StrengthAerobics treadmill sells for $769.95 and the skier for $669.95. The Multi-Trainer, which picks all the variety of a health club into one machine, goes for $1,469.95. All three have a 30-day free in-home trial.

Family Tree Can Hold Key To Stroke Risk

(NAPS)—Anne Williams had followed in her father's footsteps since childhood. He taught her to play tennis, they went to the same college and even into the same business. But it wasn't until she suffered a stroke early last year that she realized how much they really had in common.

"Even though my dad suffered a stroke, it never occurred to me that I might be at risk," said Williams, age 47. "I didn't pay much attention to the fact that it could happen to me, too."

Like Williams, many people aren't aware of how significantly their family's medical history can affect their risk of disease, and stroke is no exception. The National Stroke Association recently found that individuals with a family history of stroke are five times as likely to be afflicted with the disease than those whose families have no history of stroke. The most significant study pointing to heredity as a link to stroke was conducted at the Yale University College of Medicine in 1992. In this study among twins, researchers found a nearly five-fold increase in the prevalence of stroke, proving that genetic factors increase one's risk for stroke.

Often referred to as a "brain attack," a stroke occurs when the blood flow to the brain is suddenly interrupted. Its devastating effects—from paralysis to loss of speech and memory—make stroke America's leading cause of adult disability and third leading cause of death.

While you can't change your family's medical history, being aware of it is one of the best ways to protect yourself from stroke. In Williams' case, she didn't realize that her father's stroke was an opportunity for her to get the facts about the disease.

"Learning about our family's medical history is something we don't often do until it's too late," says Fletcher McDowell, M.D., president of the National Stroke Association. "But a full stroke may be preventable if people are aware of their stroke risk and the warning signs."

So while genes can set the stage for a stroke to occur, it's important to look out for the warning signs. Probably the most significant warning sign is a "mini-stroke" or transient ischemic attack (TIA). A TIA lasts a few minutes and causes no permanent damage, but it can be a serious foreshadowing: 36 percent of people who experience a TIA will go on to have a full stroke. The symptoms of a TIA—which are identical to the symptoms of a full stroke—include sudden blurred or decreased vision in one or both eyes, numbness of an arm, leg or side of the body, difficulty speaking or swallowing and loss of balance. A TIA often serves as the wake-up call for those at risk to make serious lifestyle changes. Quitting smoking, controlling blood pressure, eating a low-fat diet and exercising are all ways to reduce your risk.

In addition, research has proven that there's another way to help prevent a full stroke from occurring—aspirin. While many people are aware that aspirin, when used under a physician's supervision, can help prevent a second heart attack, a surprising number of people don't know that medical research has also supported aspirin's use in preventing recurrent stroke.

Ischemic strokes are similar to heart attacks in that they result from blood clots blocking blood vessels. By reducing the tendency of blood platelets to clot, aspirin allows blood to flow more freely throughout the body. Doctors began recommending aspirin as preventive therapy for recurrent strokes in 1980, after the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approved its use in treating patients who had suffered TIAs.

"More and more doctors have found an aspirin regimen, along with healthy lifestyle changes, to significantly benefit their patients at risk for stroke," says Dr. McDowell.

Most people can take aspirin without any stomach discomfort. For the two to six percent of people who actually experience stomach upset, however, doctors often recommend enteric or safety coated versions, such as BAYER® Enteric Aspirin. This formula is designed specifically for people on an aspirin regimen. If you think aspirin therapy may be right for you, see your doctor before beginning a regimen.

In cooperation with the National Stroke Association, The Bayer Company is offering an informational brochure on stroke prevention. For your free copy and coupon for $1.00 off BAYER® Aspirin products, write to "Using Your Head To Prevent Stroke," The Bayer Company, 90 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10016, or call 1-800-352-2263.

Youth shares Baha'i with readers through writings

The following is an overview of the recent Magdalene Carey Baha'i Institute luncheon held recently in Belle Glade through the words of a youth who attended the luncheon.

By Wiseley Jeudy

The leaders of the Glades area gathered together with Dr. Robert C. Henderson to consider the spiritual dimension of the education of our children. Dr. Henderson is the secretary general of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States of America.

He has worked with state and municipal leaders to establish programs to build the moral capabilities of children and youth in cities around the country. He has also served as the Grand Marshal of the annual Martin Luther King Parade in Atlanta, Ga. for the past four years.

The Magdalene Carey Baha'i Institute invited city officials, school principals and business people to the gathering to introduce the institute to the community to share its thoughts on the crucial role of spiritual education in the development of moral capabilities.

Dr. Henderson talked about the problems facing children. He said that it is up to us to make a difference. He said we don't have to wait for leaders to tell us what to do, but that we should begin now.

He stressed the critical power of love and unity saying that through collaboration, those organizations are individuals with the power to make a difference could actually turn the tide of violence and despair that has come to characterize the lives of the majority of the country's children.

The luncheon also featured a performance by the Baha'i Youth Workshop. The workshop consists of a group of youth who use the arts to teach people about God and positive principles like love and unity.

The workshop is one of over 50 which have flourished across the United States as places where youth can go and be in a safe and creative environment.

The leaders of the community were touched by the spirit of love which pervaded the luncheon. Several of these stood up to share their concerns over and experiences with the children in our community.

Some of these leaders also commented on their joy of seeing so many whites and blacks united to serve the most pressing needs of the entire community.

The overwhelming consensus was that this is a community of tremendous potential, but only through the power of united action with all of the people will this potential be brought to constructive action to improve the lives of our community's children.

We would like to thank all the wonderful, kind people who share in our grief and sorrow; to those who brought food, brought flowers, visited, and to those who kept us in your prayers. We are so thankful that there are people like you who make our grief a little easier to bear. God Bless all of you.
